

WEBSITE DESIGN BRIEF

Theme, colour and home page direction

1. What I need from you

I am building a custom website for The Atelier by SK, a painting studio. Before any code is written I need a visual direction I can review and approve. Please produce these two things:

- Theme proposal: 2 to 3 colour palettes (with hex codes), a font pairing for each, and one line on why it suits the brand.
- 2 to 3 draft images of the home page (desktop, 1440 px wide) as visual references. One draft per theme is ideal. A matching mobile frame for your best draft is a bonus.
- Under each image, add a short note describing the motion (what animates, how, and when), since a still image cannot show it.

2. The project

The studio's owner paints, and the site will display and sell her original paintings as a full e-commerce store. The audience is art buyers and collectors, and most will visit on a phone. The site should feel like walking into a private gallery: quiet, confident, and expensive without being loud. The paintings are the heroes and the interface should recede around them.

3. Non-negotiable rules

- No carousel or slider anywhere.
- No static hero image. The hero section must be fully animated and alive.
- Not a template look. It should feel designed specifically for this studio.
- Gold is an accent used sparingly, never a flood.
- Everything you show must be buildable on the web (CSS, canvas, WebGL or similar). Do not design effects that only exist in film or 3D software.
- It must stay smooth on mid-range phones, so keep the hero idea lightweight enough to degrade gracefully.

4. Brand identity (from the supplied logo)

The logo is a round, near-black badge with thick, textured metallic paint strokes in gold, bronze, champagne and charcoal. The wordmark is cream. The palette below was sampled directly from the logo. Your palettes may extend it, but should stay in the same family.

Warm black #151410	Cream (wordmark) #F2DEBF	Champagne #E4C48F	Gold #D0A971
Taupe #B4A187	Bronze #876D4F	Dark bronze #4B3D2C

TYPE

Wordmark: a high-contrast, wide-tracked serif in capitals for "THE ATELIER" and "BY SK". Tagline: a thin, flowing script for "Art lives here". Please suggest web-safe or Google Fonts pairings that echo this (an elegant display serif for headings, a clean quiet sans for body and shop UI, and an optional script for small flourishes).

5. Hero direction

I want a hero that is a living piece of art rather than a picture. Three ideas I am considering. Feel free to propose better ones:

- Paint in motion: the screen opens black and thick gold, bronze and champagne strokes sweep in and layer like a palette knife, resolving into the wordmark and the script tagline.
- Living canvas: a slow, textured, oil-like surface that reacts to the cursor (touch or tilt on phones), with light catching the ridges. Paintings surface through it as the visitor scrolls.
- Studio light: a dark gallery wall where a soft spotlight follows the cursor and reveals paintings one at a time.

My current leaning: open with Paint in motion, then carry the living canvas texture through the rest of the page.

6. Theme directions to explore

- Gallery Noir: warm black throughout, gold hairlines, cream serif headings, paintings lit like spotlight wall pieces.
- Gilded Ivory: an ivory or champagne base with black type and gold only as an accent, like a high-end gallery catalogue.
- Atelier to Gallery (hybrid): a dark, moody animated hero that scrolls into a lighter gallery section, so the story of the studio comes first and the work is shown on a neutral backdrop.

You do not have to use these three. If you see a stronger direction, show it, and label it clearly as your own suggestion.

7. About the draft images

- I have not supplied the paintings yet. Use abstract placeholder paintings in rich textured gold, bronze, neutral and charcoal tones, and mark them as placeholders.
- Show, at minimum: the navigation, the animated hero (a key frame, with motion described in the caption), and the first scroll section where paintings begin to appear.
- Anything beyond that is your suggestion. Please label it so I can tell it apart from what I asked for.
- Do not include any text I did not provide other than obvious placeholder copy. The studio name is The Atelier by SK and the tagline is Art lives here.

Please return the palettes, font pairings and draft images in one response, in that order.
